

Data Sharing Policies

The North Journal of Humanities encourages all researchers submitting to the journal to share their research data, except in cases where ethical, legal, or privacy concerns impede such sharing. As such, authorized researchers are encouraged to share data upon request. If a third party holds ownership of the data, researchers obtaining data from this third party will share it with the proper authorization obtained from said third party.